Expulsion in Early Childhood

Did you know that preschoolers are expelled at a rate three to four times higher than children in K-12th grade? Expulsion can have lasting, negative impacts on a child and his or her family. Instead of expelling children with challenging behaviors, early education programs should assess the child's needs and determine the behavioral supports necessary for the child to succeed in his or her current educational program or transition the child to a program better able to meet his or her needs.

What is expulsion?

Expulsion is when a child is permanently removed from a childcare setting due to various reasons. Typically, challenging behavior is the main reason for expulsion from early childhood programs. Soft expulsion involves repeatedly asking parents to pick up their child or to come to the center to address their child's behavioral issues. Expulsion has negative effects on the child and family. When a child is expelled they miss out on the opportunity to learn and socialize. It can create negative thought patterns about self, learning, and teachers. Furthermore, expulsion can actually create more behavioral challenges for the child in the future.

What causes the high rates of expulsion in early childhood?

There may be a lot of factors contributing to a child getting expelled. Most of these factors can be prevented if we are proactive and work as a team. Below are a few factors that may lead to a child getting expelled from a childcare center.

- High teacher-child ratios
- Teacher's perception or mindset
- Lack of support
- Challenging behaviors can be stressful
- Long school days
- Not knowing the negative impact of expulsion

Strategies to prevent expulsion.

Review the following strategies to help prevent expulsion in your classroom. These strategies can be beneficial at the earliest signs of a child's behavior concerns.

- Create a predictable, supportive, high quality environment
- Develop a challenging behavior or expulsion policy at your center
- Focus on the child's strengths and positives
- Teach skills to help the child identify, manage and communicate their emotions
- Talk it through and rely on your support team
- Work with the family as a team
- Educate yourself and others about expulsion
- Reach out to Sanford CHILD Services for more support if needed
